JACK ADAMS - Manager.

When Jack Adams moved from the combined coaching and managerial duties of the Red Wings to the General Managership of the Detroit Hockey organization last fall there were many who felt it would be impossible for Adams to remain that inactive in the actual fortunes of his beloved big Red machine.

However Adams once again proved the malleability which has marked his thirty years association with professional hockey. He made the transition just as successfully and efficiently as when he hung up his skates as an active member of a cup - winning Ottawa Senators and moved into Detroit to handle the Cougars when they first appeared in Olympia.

That Jack fitted into his new niche successfully is proven by the record. He handled the duties of his general managership so efficiently that the already powerful organization expanded greatly in scope. Yet, while the coaching was Tommy Ivan's show, Jack was able to lend a helping hand and the value of his years of devotion to the game.

A great competitor, Jack still plays each game just as hard as when he left the Copper Country of Upper Michigan to try his fortune as a professional player, or as when he assumed his coaching task and his first squad skated out on Olympia ice.

The personality of Adams is difficult to appraise. He is a stern taskmaster, loyal to his club, and demander of the best efforts of its members. Yet he is a sentimental Irishman, keenly interested in the personalities which make up the team. Thus he has always been in a position to evaluate hockey talent from more than one viewpoint, which may account for the success enjoyed by Adams - coached players throughout the hockey world.

He is a keen wit, a gregarious person who enjoys good food and good company with the best. A great reader, and an avid baseball and football fan, Jack keeps well posted on the world around him, yet hockey remains the dominating factor in his every hour.

Jack has made his permanent home in Detroit for some years. Off the ice and on his all consuming passion remains the same, winter or summer, more and better hockey.

THOMAS NATHANIEL IVAN - Coach.

Had there been official recognition for the Coach of the Year among National League pilots undoubtedly Tommy Ivan, freshman with the Detroit Red Wings would have warranted strong consideration. As it was the little Torontonian was selected by the fans as first - team coach in the All Star poll conducted by the Hockey News.

To add to Tommy's laurels he has been named to pilot the All Star team against Toronto in the Chicago Stadium in November.

Ivan, in his first season, achieved success rarely found in an opening year by a coach who had never played professional hockey. In achieving the right to handle an N. H. L. club under such circumstances, Ivan joined a respected company of men.

Most of Ivan's hockey career, following his retirement as a player, has been bound up with the Detroit organization. When a severe facial injury, suffered while he was playing senior amateur hockey in Brantford eleven years ago forced him to hang up his skates as an active participant, Tommy took to refereeing and coaching.

The latter proved to be his field, and he soon had established himself through his handling of junior teams in Brantford and Guelph. He tutored such present National League players as Leo Reise, Bill Quackenbush, and Doug McCaig.

His efficient handling of young players attracted the attention of Carson Cooper, Detroit scout, who arranged a tie - up between Ivan and the Red Wings. Tommy coached their affiliated junior clubs and assisted Cooper with the gigantic scouting task.

In 1942 Ivan entered the Canadian Army, remaining in service until 1945. Honorably discharged he returned to the Detroit organization and found a niche waiting for him in Omaha. Inactive during the war Omaha and Ivan rejoined hockey simultaneouly.

The same skill in handling youth which had first brought him into the Detroit organization again won him promotion, this time to Indianapolis, following a season with the Knights.

A year ago he moved into the coaching berth with the Wings when Jack Adams moved to the general managership.

Tommy's quiet, modest manner, which is unchanging on or off the bench, won him immediate respect throughout hockey. He appears headed for a long career in the big league.

Golf and planning for the coming campaign occupy most of his off - season interest. He once coached baseball in Brantford and still watches the game with interest. Despite his size he is a strong and powerful golfer

A good trencherman he is one the best lobster eaters in the National League. He is a great reader of sports prose, but unlike most hockey men has little interest in card games.

Sidney Gerald Abel

Born Melville, Saskatchewan, February 22, 1918. Height 5'11". Weight 185 lbs.

Beginning his third season as Captain of the Red Wings is one of the verterans of the Detroit hockey organization, Sid Abel. Abel, who has been in professional hockey regularly since 1938, save two and a half years in the Royal Canadian Air Force, has played all of his career in the Detroit system, and is one of the two holdovers from the Red Wing club which last won a Stanley Cup in April, 1943.

Sid is one of the great inspirational players of all time among Detroiters. He is a hard going player who never knows defeat, and is one of the most universally respected players, by team mates and opponents alike, in the National League.

Throughout his career Sid has alternated between left wing and center, finally finding his niche at the latter position. He won his greatest fame at left wing however, being selected on the second All - Star team at that position in 1942 - 1943. Abel was one of the original ten men selected for membership in Detroit's Hall of Hockey Fame, and last season won the Detroit Hockey Writers' Award as the club's most valuable player.

His greatest ambition is to score 100 goals for the Red Wings in regular season play. He enters this season with a lifetime record of 82 goals, 134 assists, in 490 National League encounters. He ranks seventh among the Red Wings' All - Time scorers.

Abel spent two years alternating between the Wings and their farm clubs at the start of his career, finally establishing himself as a regular with Don Grosso and Eddie Wares on the "Liniment Line" in 1941 - 1942. After three regular seasons he entered the Canadian service, receiving his honorable discharge in February, 1946. He immediately rejoined the Wings and was named Captain, a title he has held ever since, but saw little service due to a serious throat illness.

Off the ice he is one of two players who make their permanent homes in Detroit. He married Gloria Morandy, an Olympia staff secretary, in 1943, and has one son, Gerald Scott Abel. In Detroit Abel spends his off - season as a contact representative for the Springfield Detail and Machine Parts Company, one of Detroit's larger industries.

Sid, who received the nickname "Bootnose" some years back, is a cribbage and gin rummy player; likes golf and an occasional softball game. The nickname has been since shortened to "Boot".

Edward Bruneteau

Born - Saint Boniface, Manitoba. August 1, 1919. Height 5'9". Weight 175 lbs.

One of the enigmas of hockey is Eddie Bruneteau, fast skating, hard shooting right wing who has been a member of the Detroit hockey organization since 1939. Originally brought to the club by his older brother, Mud, now Omaha pilot, Eddie spent a year and a half in the farm system before reaching the Red Wing lineup late in the 1941 season.

The following season Ed went to work in a Quebec shipyard, and barring a few games played with Detroit in Montreal, was out of professional hockey entirely. He returned to the regular lineup in the fall of 1944 and was with the club until early last season when he was sent down to Indianapolis.

Based on his showing in the pre - season games this year, the veteran Eddie is determined to put the Bruneteau name back in National League box scores.

One of the hardest shooting right wings in hockey, he has seldom been able to control his sufficiently to make it telling, and at the same time despite his speed and strong skating has had difficulty in using those qualities advantageously.

Currently he appears slated for a utility berth, killing off penalties and filling in spots on the right side.

Married, and with two children, Eddie makes his permanent home across the river in Windsor, Ontario. In the off season he is the playing manager and backer of a semi-professional baseball team.

James Conacher

Born Motherwell, Scotland, May 5, 1921. Height 5'10". Weight 155 lbs.

Lanky Jim Conacher, the brush - cut left wing, is starting his second full season with the Red Wings. With center Jim McFadden he enjoys the distinction of being one of the club's two European - born players, having hailed from Motherwell, Scotland.

He moved to Toronto at an early age and learned his hockey with the Toronto Young Rangers and the Oshawa Generals. Scouted by Carson Cooper he turned professional in 1941 and was sent to Omaha. With the Knights he was a keystone in building their championship club, and was selected as the league's most promising freshman.

Three years of service in the Canadian Army followed. With a honorable discharge tucked in his wallet Jim returned to hockey with the Red Wings in 1945. He was used sparingly as a utility forward, and shortly before Christmas was sent down to Indianapolis for further seasoning.

Recalled for the playoffs he was back in the Capital Blue at the beginning of the 1946 campaign. On Christmas night he was again summoned to Detroit and installed at left wing in a spot he has since never vacated.

Despite his slenderness, which occasionally causes him to tire, he is an indestructable player. A clever skater and stick handler he is adept at avoiding bruising checks and has not missed a game through injuries since joining the Wings.

Conacher finished second to Howie Meeker in the Calder Trophy voting two seasons ago, and last year he was third among the Detroit goal getters, and receiving only one minor penalty in the full 60 games, was given Lady Byng consideration.

Jim makes Detroit his permanent home. He is married to the former Bonnie Amgwert, an Omaha girl whom he met as a studio receptionist when he appeared on a sports radio program when he first joined the Knights. A good golfer, Jim is a close spectator at all Detroit sports where he doesn't participate, and is an inveterate theatre - goer, to both moving pictures and the stage. In the off - season he is employed by Metal Mouldings Corporation.

Gerald Wilfred Joseph Couture

Born - Saskatoon, Saskatchewan. August 6, 1925. Height 5'2". Weight 185 lbs.

Back with a do - or - die determination to establish himself as a National Leaguer is husky Doc Couture. The big fellow has been in and out of the Red Wing lineup ever since he turned professional during the Stanley Cup Finals in April, 1945.

That season Doc had been a member of the Moose Jaw Juniors who won the Western championship and came to Maple Leaf Gardens to compete for the Memorial Cup just as the Red Wings were meeting Toronto for the Stanley Cup. The Wings signed the lanky Westerner and installed him immediately in the Detroit lineup.

The following fall he appeared regularly in a Red Wing uniform but could not seem to prove himself as a big leaguer. Two years followed in which he divided his playing time between Detroit and Indianapolis. He was sensational in the American League on each appearance but could not seem to quite hit his stride in the big time.

Now he is back for his fourth shot at the N. H. L. and judging by his condition spirit when he reported to the training camp he is in deadly earnest. Big and strong he is a sound player rather than a spectacular one.

Off the ice he is a quiet fellow with an interest in music and education. He has attended the University of Detroit and the University of Saskatchewan. Unmarried, he makes his summer home in Saskatoon where he follows his family's trade as a baker. Unlike most hockey players who prefer golf and baseball as off season sports, Doc is a tennis player.

Rene Fernand Gauthier

Born Chicoutimi, Quebec, August 31, 1919. Height 5'10". Weight 175 lbs.

Fern is one of the chief pinch - hitters in the Red Wing organization, whose position is difficult to appraise. In years he is one of the oldest members of a youthful squad. He is starting his eighth season in professional hockey, and is now with his third National League Club. Perhaps that indefinable matter of luck is the factor which Gauthier lacks and which has kept him from reaching hockey stardom.

He came to the Detroit organization in the fall of 1945 as a replacement in a player trade. The Wings had secured Ray Getliffe and Roland Rossignol from Montreal for Billy Reey, but the latter announced his retirement from hockey, and the Canadiens, to keep the transaction intact, substituted Gauthier.

Since joining the Detroit organization he has divided his time between the Wings and Indianapolis. He has shown great form in practices, and considerable scoring potency in the minor league, but somehow has never reached his full point - getting punch in the majors.

Last season he spent the latter half of the year in Detroit and developed into a sound defensive player, whose chief task was defense against power plays. He discharged that duty very well, and filled in the odd turn on the right side acceptably.

Fern, who has probably the largest collection of pipes of any professional hockey player, accepts his lot with a Gallic philosophy and goes about his appointed task. He is married, and in the past two summers has deserted his regular capacity as a hunting and fishing guide to work as shipper in a surplus commodities warehouse in Montreal.

Armand Guidolin

Born - Thorold, Ontario. December 9, 1925. Height 5'6". Weight 175 lbs.

One of the youngest veterans in the National League is left wing Bep Guidolin. The husky youngster who has never played in the minor leagues jumped from the Oshawa Generals to the N. H. L. just before his seventeenth birthday, and barring a year in the armed services, has never left the big league.

Despite his French sounding name and dark, curly hair, Guidolin is of Italian parentage, and his fiery play on the ice proves it. With Pete Horeck he shares the distinction of being the sole Red Wings who are not products of the Detroit hockey organization.

Guidolin and a junior named Bob Folk became Detroit property just before the opening of the season a year ago in trade for Billy Taylor.

He first attracted attention with the Boston Bruins as a member of a youthful forward combination called "The Sprout Line". Neither of his linemates, Don Gallinger nor Bill Shill, are still in the major league.

Last season he married Eleanor Meister, one of the country's outstanding ice show performers. They make their off season home in Timmins, where Bep plays softball and is a mine worker.

Peter Horeck

Born - Massey, Ontario, June 15, 1923. Height 5'8". Weight 158 lbs.

A truly honest hockey player is the appelation given Pete Horeck by his teammates. Horeck is a left hand shot playing right wing, and doing it so well that he seems to be destined to stay on the right side throughout his days in hockey.

A quiet fellow Horeck is one of the fastest skaters on the club. He keeps boring in and is a good finisher and, despite his size, a tenacious checker. He has a variety of nicknames, of which "Buzz saw" and "Hurricane" have become the most popular.

Pete is the middle of three hockey playing brothers by age, but the most proficient in results, being the only one of the trio to reach the National League. Johnny, the eldest, has been a minor leaguer for several seasons, while Danny, the youngster, is still an amateur.

Horeck has the distinction of having been the last player drafted out of the American League into the National, and is one of the few players on the Red Wings who has not come directly through Detroit's large farm system.

He began his professional hockey career with Cleveland, and after two seasons was drafted by Chicago, where he played both wings equally. He was traded to the Wings in December, 1946, after two and a half seasons with the Black Hawks, Adam Brown going to Chicago in the deal, and has been a regular Detroiter ever since.

Off the ice Pete, who is still a bachelor, is a quiet person who is very self-contained. He is a reader rather than a card player, and is noted for his ability to discover moderate priced shopping centers in every National League city. During the summer he returns to the family home in Capreol where he joins in the management of a newly opened family - owned hotel.

Gordon Howe

Born - Floral, Saskatchewan, May 31, 1928. Height 5'11". Weight 185 lbs.

Playing his second season in the National League young Gordie Howe received sufficient recognition to warrant a place on the third All Star Team. And judging by the combination of ability and improvement which this hucky Westerner shows it will not be too long before he qualifies for an even higher rating.

Howe is still the youngest member of the team. He has played all of his professional hockey under Detroit's aegis. He originally attracted the attention of Fred Pinkney, Detroit's head scout in the West when he was 15 years old, and went to Galt, Ontario, to join the Wings' sponsored junior club there. An improper transfer however prevented his participation in O. H. A. play and he was limited to exhibition games.

Even with a relatively inactive season Howe won a professional contract when he was but 17, being sent to the Omaha Knights, with Tommy Ivan as his Coach. He scored 48 points in his freshman year and was a key factor in the club's winning the league championship.

The following season he was in a Red Wing uniform, and there he bids fair to stey. A strong skater, he is rated one of the cleverest stick handlers and finishers in the game today. In his second big league season he doubled his point output, and may well be a 20 - goal player this year.

Quiet and laconic he is slow to anger, but when angered is a match for most any player. Howe is possessed of a wealth of natural ability, and is so mechanically sound that he often appears to be loafing when actually it is his ease and grace which creates this impression.

Gordie is unmarried, makes his home with his family in Saskatoon in the summer, and plays softfall to keep in top shape.

Leonard Patrick Kelly

Born - Simcoe, Ontario, June 9, 1927. Height 5'11". Weight 180 lbs.

Judging by last season, his first in professional hockey, Kelly is destined to be one of the outstanding defense men in the game. The red-haired youngster who just attained his legal majority in June, made the jump from St. Michael's Junior to the National League in a single season and proved that the Red Wing official staff was correct in affording him the opportunity for this size leap.

Unlike his appearance, which is a square-jawed, red headed battling Irishman, Kelly is a quiet, thorough, deliberate workman. He proved a sound checker, both with his body and his stick. Playing all 60 games he drew four minor penalties and one major, and conducted himself so well in a fistic battle which earned him the major, that it was easy to see why he had been boxing champion of his weight group at St. Michael's.

He rooms with the other quiet man of the Wings, Bill Quackenbush, and has no higher booster than Quack. Bill feels that Kelly is slated for stardom, and pointed out first that he uses his skate to propel a puck more effectively than many players use a stick.

Len, who naturally has the nickname "Red", finished fourth in the voting for the Calder Trophy last season.

Kelly neither drinks, smokes, nor swears, but has won immortal hockey fame by his vehement "Aw shucks" in moments of greatest stress.

Off the ice he is a typical farm boy, quiet, complacent, and confident. He returns to his family's fruit farm outside of Simcoe in the off-season. Kelly is unmarried.

Robert Blake Theodore Lindsay

Born - Renfrew, Ontario, July 29, 1925. Height 5'10". Weight 165 lbs.

When Ted Lindsay was unanimously selected the left wing position on the National League's first All - Star team last season, Red Wing followers felt that the youngster who made the leap directly from the ranks of a Junior O. H. A. team to the National circuit had arrived.

Battling Ted, whose aggressiveness makes him a marked player throughout the league, topped the entire circuit in goal getting last year, bagging 33 markers.

In four years he has left his mark on the scoring records of the league, having achieved a lifetime record of 84 goals and 49 assists. Lindsay has the ability to finish a play or score from well out with his strong shot, equally well. He may well reach the century mark in goals this season, and become the seventh Detroit player in history to achieve such a record. Ranking 13th among Detroit's all-time scorers, with 133 points, he is certain to move into the top ten at the end of the new campaign, and might well end his career as Detroit's highest all-time point-getter.

Lindsay was scouted by Carson Cooper during his junior days at Toronto St. Michael's, and briefly with the Oshawa Generals. He reported to the camp in the fall of 1944, just after his 19th birthday, and was immediately placed in a major league uniform.

A durable youngster, Lindsay has missed only nine games in his four years. Last season he reached his peak to date, outdoing all previous scoring efforts in goals, assists, and total points. He was selected on the third N. H. L. All Star team in 1946 - 1947, and won the Detroit Hockey Writers' Award as the club's most valuable member the same season. Last year he progressed to the first team and won the Frank J. Murphy Memorial Trophy for leading the club in total goals, and the Harry A. Gormley Trophy for topping the club in points.

During the off-season he makes his home with his parents at Kirkland Lake, Ontario. Normally a gold prospector, he had little opportunity to work during the past summer, having to report to Detroit regularly for medical check-ups following a nasal operation. Unmarried, he is in close touch with his parents. His father, Bert Lindsay, one of hockey's early goal-tending greats, keeps an enthusiastic eye on the game through Ted.

Harry Lumley

Born - Owen Sound, Ontario, November 11, 1926. Height 6'. Weight 190 lbs.

Although he attained legal majority only last season, Lumley still enjoys the distinction of being not only the youngest goal tender in the National Hockey League, but of starting his fourth season between the pipes for the Red Wings.

Just 16 when he joined the Detroit organization in March, 1943, as practice goalie, Lumley has played all of his hockey with the Detroit organization. He spent a year and a half with Indianapolis, barring a three game trial with the Red Wings, before establishing himself as a major leaguer, butonce he took over the regular task, he has staked a permanent claim to it.

Harry came through his acid test last season with flying colors. Injured just before the playoffs in 1947 he undervent a serious operation which, it was felt, might put an end to his hockey career.

However he came back to the Wings last year to enjoy his best season in professional hockey. He cut his goals per game against average to 2.45, half a goal per game better than in any previous National League year. He topped the circuit in shut outs, with seven, and was the only net-minder to blank every other N. H. L. club. He remained in close competition for the Vezina Trophy throughout the season, and was barely nosed by a four-goal margin in the last two contest of the 60-game schedule.

When one realized his continued improvement in the face of markedly better major league competition one cannot but expect that the rosy-cheeked Harry is headed for a long career in the big league. He was under fire at the close of the season, but will be back in the nets this year, and may well end the season as the circuit's top goaler.

Harry makes his summer home in Owen Sound. This year he played softball and lacrosse to keep in top trim, activities denied him a year ago because of his operation. He is unmerried, is the team's top cigar smoker and a strong card player.

Douglas McCaig

Born - Guelph, Ontario, February 24, 1920. Height 6'. Weight 200 lbs.

One of the biggest blows to the Red Wings' hopes last season came when big Doug McCaig suffered a fractured ankle early in January and went out of action for the remainder of the year. The handsome, fun loving rear guard appeared to be on his way to the fulfillment of his promise as an erstwhile major leaguer.

McCaig, the biggest man, physically, on the Wing squad, will be trying out the mended ankle for the first time since his accident last fall. In early workouts he has shown that the injury appears completely healed.

Doug started out as a junior under Tommy Ivan in Brantford in 1938, then came to Detroit and spent two seasons with Holzbaugh Fords of the Michigan-Ontario League, while attending the University of Detroit. He was signed to a professional contract in January, 1941, and shipped out to Indianapolis for the remainder of the season.

The next year Doug played a few games with the Red Wings at the start of the campaign, but was returned to the Capitals to finish the season. The war here intervened and Doug spent three years in the Royal Canadian Air Force as a coast defense pilot, before returning to hockey in 1945. He was loaned to St. Louis at the start of that season, moved to Indianapolis, and ended up the year with Detroit. Another divided season between the Capitals and Wings followed, but last fall McCaig established himself as a regular until his untimely injury.

Noted as one of the best fighters and hardest body checkers in the game Doug's biggest fault has been inconsistency. He is a strong skater and has a powerful shot, which unfortunately lacks direction.

However, apparently fully recovered, he looks forward to a bumper season.

He married a Toronto girl just after the close of the past season, makes his permanent home in Brantford. He enjoys cards and is a softball player of note, having gained a reputation as a long batter.

James Alexander McFadden

Born - Belfast, Ireland, April 16, 1921. Height 5'7". Weight 180 lbs.

When stocky Jim McFadden was voted the "Rookie of the Year" at the close of the past campaign he brought the Calder Trophy to Detroit for the first time since its inception. The quiet, unassuming wheat farmer from Darlingford, Manitoba, scored 24 goals and the same number of assists to pace all first year N. H. L. players in point-getters, and to break all existing records for scoring by a first-season Red Wing.

In addition Jim proved to be a durable player, seeing probably as much actual service on the ice as any Detroit forward. He showed great defensive skill, especially as a fore-checker, and took over much of Ted Lindsay's work in killing off penalties, thus allowing the lighter Lindsay needed rest time.

McFadden says little, so little in fact that it is somewhat difficult to trace his hockey background. He was known as an amateur who starred with the Ottawa Senators in 1946-47 following his discharge from the Canadian Army and an unsuccessful appearance in the Montreal training camp. Recently it has come to light that he first played professional hockey as early as 1940 in the old Pacific Coast League, the last year it operated on a pro basis.

He first attracted true attention when Buffalo offered him a professional contract in mid-season of the '46-7 campaign. Ottawa, an amateur team claimed a prior contract, and Mac was the subject of much debate and some litigation before he was permitted to join Buffalo.

From there he was secured by Detroit at the end of the season. He appeared in the Red Wing lineup briefly during their first round playoff series with Toronto. He showed considerable promise but could not be evaluated on his brief showing.

Yet from the beginning he was an outstanding member of the Red Wings. He surpassed the fondest expectations of all hockey followers, and definitely proved his right to a place in the National League.

Mac divides his summer between his wheat farm and a local softball team, for whom he plays shortstop. He is unmarried, and in addition to the Calder Trophy was awarded, in Detroit, the J. L. Citron Trophy for his sportsmanlike play.

Maxwell Douglas McNab

Born - Watson, Saskatchewan, July 2, 1924. Height 6'2". Weight 170 lbs.

Back for a second trial in the major leagues, and almost a sure shot to make the grade this time is lanky Max McNab. The tallest member of the Red Wing squad, McNab is in his third year of professional hockey, and has had an amazing career.

Signed to a tryout agreement before the war, he was prevented from reporting to Detroit by service in the Canadian Navy. When he was honorably discharged in the fall of 1946 he showed at fall training, a hungry-looking, sad-eyed youngster who seemed the hockey personification of the third gravedigger in "Hamlet!"

The boy was found to be suffering from anaemia, and at the start of the season was kept in Detroit to play for Metal Mouldings of the International Amateur Hockey League, before turning professional. After building up his weight he was shipped to Indianapolis, but saw little action. When Pete Horeck and Leo Paiue were secured from Chicago in trade for Adam Brown and Ray Powell, Omaha was shy a center, and Max was moved on to the Knights. He scored 39 points in a half season, and established himself as a comer.

Following the close of regular season play Jack Adams took an All Star team into Western Canada to barnstrom against the Canadiens. Needing players Adams added McNab en route and the lanky Scot turned out to be the star of the troupe. He handled himself well and proved his ability to compete with hockey's best.

Last fall he opened the season with the Wings as a utility player. He saw limited service in a dozen games when Omaha was again without a center, due to a series of injuries. Down went McNab again, theoretically for a limited time. However in his second game with the Knights he broke his nose, and went out of action himself. When he returned he sparked Omaha to a playoff position, scoring 44 goals and 32 assists in half the season. He led the league in goal scoring and had the best point per game average in the circuit.

Max was recalled to Detroit in time to play in the Stanley Cup finals against Toronto and showed a wealth of promise.

This season he will be back as a major leaguer, and on his limited previous service, may well warrant consideration when the Calder Trophy voting rolls around next spring.

McNab is unmarried and makes his summer home in Saskatoon, where he is a construction worker.

Donald MacRae Morrison

Born - Saskatoon, Saskatchewan. July 14, 1923. Height 5'9½". Weight 165 lbs.

When a younger brother scouts an older brother as a hockey player, it's news. Yet such is exactly the circumstance which brought Don Morrison to the Red Wing organization. Before the war younger brother Rod played one season, then joined Don in service. When both were discharged Rod returned to hockey and brought his elder brother to camp with him.

A serious, steady type of player, Don immediately attracted attention and won a contract with the Omaha Knights in the fall of 1945. He spent two seasons in the Iowa city and in his second year paced the United States League in point scoring, bagging 32 goals and 44 assists.

Last fall he was promoted to the Indianapolis club at the start of the season, but on New Years won his way into the Red Wing lineup where he finished soundly, tallying 10 goals and 15 assists in a bare half season.

Married to an Omaha girl, Don now makes that city his year round home. He has one daughter. Off the ice he is as quiet as on, but with a mischevious sense of humor.

Martin Pavelich

Born - Sault Sainte Marie, Ontario, November 6, 1927. Height 5'11". Weight 170 lbs.

One of the top names in the Red Wing future book is husky Marty Pavelich. The black-haired, dark complexioned youngster broke into professional hockey at the start of last season after three years at the Red Wings' sponsored Galt Junior club, and was sent to Indianapolis.

By mid-year he was in Detroit, installed in the Wing lineup, and perfectly at home. The boy shows great competitive spirit and an all-around measure of ability in shooting, passing, finishing, and skating. He filled in on several line combinations at both left wing and center, and looked like another Sid Abel all the way.

He is the painstaking, plodding type who will not blossom over night, but who by steady and diligent application of his natural hockey resources should establish himself as a star. Marty has a wealth of drive, and a great eagerness to improve himself in hockey.

Off the ice he is rather shy, always smiling and good humored, and with such veterans as Gordon Howe and Ted Lindsay has formed a "Three Musketeers" type of group.

He makes his permanent home in the Soo, being the only member of the club who was training at home in the Eastern camp this fall. Unmarried, he is a softball catcher and one of the better ones during the summer months.

Hubert George Quackenbush

Born - Toronto, Ontario, March 2, 1922. Height 5'11" Weight 175 lbs.

Half of Detroit's All Star defensive duo is veteran Bill Quackenbush, who is opening seventh season in a Red Wing uniform this fall. Quack reached his heights last season when he led the voting for the defense men on the All Star team. The preceding season he had been named to the second team.

Quackenbush is a hockey player's hockey player. He is a thorough and efficient checker without dealing out heavy resounding body checks, and he is admittedly one of the best scoring rear guards in the game. Last year he finished second among the defense players in scoring.

Bill is a true product of the Detroit organization. He began as a junior in Brantford, with Tommy Ivan, present Wing Coach as his mentor. After two seasons he graduated to professional hockey and broke right into the National League with the Wings in 1942. A wrist injury sidelined him after ten games, and when he returned to active play he was sent to Indianapolis for seasoning.

The following year he was back in a Detroit uniform, where he has remained ever since. In 1943 he was tried briefly at center, because of his scoring ability, before being definitely assigned a right defense post.

He is universally respected among hockey players for his clean play and sportsmanship. In all he has amassed only 49 penalty minutes in his entire National League career. Last season he reached a new high, for him, of 17 minutes, including the first major penalty of his entire hockey career. If any player among defense men is a candidate to break the stranglehold which the forwards have held on the Lady Byng Trophy it is Quackenbush.

Christened Hubert George, Quack gained the nickname, Bill, from an aunt who claimed he was manly enough to definitely be a "Bill".

One of the most elegible bachelors, he divides the off-season between Detroit and his family home in Toronto. His younger brother Max, is starting the professional climb in the Detroit organization this season and some day soon the two may be teamed on the defense.

Quackenbush is a golfer and softball player, enjoys a good card game, and is the leading legitimate theatre fan among the Red Wing players.

Leo Charles Reise, Jr.

Born - Saltfleet, Ontario, June 7, 1922. Height 6'. Weight 180 lbs.

One of the biggest players on the Detroit squad is defense player Leo Reise. Leo enjoys the distinction of being the first second-generation hockey player to establish himself as a National Leaguer. His father spent six years as a big league star in Hamilton and New York 26 years ago.

Reise, Jr., proved his mettle last season when he drew a heavy load of work at the end of the year. The club's other two right defense men, Doug McCaig and Bill Quackenbush were sidelined or cut to limited service because of injurys and Reise proved his fighting heart and ability by the manner in which he took over.

He gained his greatest fame in a single night. Returning from a road trip one Sunday he learned that his wife had been seriously injured in a motor accident. Leo played his strongest game that night, scoring two goals in a single contest for the first time in his professional career.

Leo began his professional hockey career as a member of the Chicago organization when he came out of the Canadian Army. He shuttled between the Black Hawks and Kansas City for a year and a half when he was traded to Detroit. At the time he was unheralded, being an extra man included with Pete Horeck from the Hawks, who received Adam Brown and Raymond Powell.

How well he worked out has been shown.

He is the club comedian, with a fine sense of timing and the unexpected in his humor. He is rated as one of the most astute cribbage and gin rummy players among the Wings.

In the off-season he returns to Brantford where he pursues his summer occupation of accountancy. He is married, has one son, Leo Gerald.

With Bill Quackenbush and Doug McCaig he enjoys the distinction of having played junior hockey at Brantford under Tommy Ivan.

John Sherratt Stewart

Born - Pilot Mound, Manitoba, May 6, 1917. Height 5'10½". Weight 180 lbs.

Oldest member of the Red Wings both in actual years and point of service is Jack Stewart, half of the club's All Star defensive combination. Stewart, who has played all of his professional hockey under the sponsorship of the Detroit organization, has been a regular member of the Red Wing rear guard since 1938, save two seasons spent in the Royal Canadian Air Force.

When Stewart was selected by the N. H. L. coaches to the left defense position on the league's All-Star team at the close of the campaign this season it marked his second appearance on the first six, his fourth All-Star mention, and his third consecutive appearance on either the first or second teams. He had been placed on the second team in both 1945 - 46 and 1946 - 47.

In that All Star selection Stewart has drawn a considerable source of satisfaction as he is the only N. H. L. defense player to be so honored playing under two different sets of defensive rules.

Following a season and a half with Pittsburgh, a Wing farm club at the time, and three and a half seasons with the Wings, the Manitoba wheat farmer appeared to have reached his peak in 1942 - 43. He rated an All Star berth and was a key factor in bringing the Stanley Cup to Detroit. During his two years armed service the center red line came into being and he was forced to relearn his defensive position when he returned to hockey.

Still rated as one of the hardest body checkers in the game, Jack is a sound offensive player. His rushing and shooting abilities have improved with the years, and last season he registered 19 points for his all-time high scoring total.

Unmarried he spends his summers on his family's wheat farm, playing some softball, and following Pilot Mound's very active trotting track. The latter project was originally erected by his father on Stewart property but has since been sold to the municipality.

He is noted for his silence and unexpected flashes of laconic wit.
